

The Federal Government has no place in regulating State laws, especially when the State legislature has been democratically elected by the people who live in that State, and ACTUALLY know what is important to them. If the Do Not Call List Law is compromising the "ethics" that these telemarketers practice, maybe the FCC should try to regulate the business practices, not the voluntary requests of law abiding taxpaying citizens who would like to have a little quiet time with their families at the end of a hard working day!!!!!! A suggestion: Regulate the times that telemarketers can contact private citizens and/ or insist that written communication be sent to the potential clients requesting their information by mail IF they wish to do business with the company communicating with them, then the private citizen has the OPTION to respond!!!! We are land based on laws and values and since we are now on a worldwide crusade to "respect the differences" and "teach democracy", then let us start with ourselves and not disregard what we have all worked so hard to protect!!!!
